European Experts Successfully Conclude Braşov Summit on Organic Climate

The Kronsoft Center recently hosted the 5th Project

Meeting of OrganicClimateNET, held from April 22-24, 2026. The event brought together leading agricultural researchers and experts from across Europe to strengthen the organic farm network spearheading the transition toward climate-neutral agriculture.

Over three days, project partners including FiBL, IFOAM, and Innovarum collaborated under the Horizon Europe programme to align organic farming practices with European Union climate goals.

Event Highlights:

- Strategic Policy Dialogue: “World Cafe”; sessions defining national policy priorities for organic climate farming.
- Field Innovation: Site visits to BioCarpathia and the farm of Catean Silviu Nicolae, providing first-hand demonstrations of climate-resilient practices.
- Carbon Strategy Development: Workshops resulting in concrete plans for carbon management strategies and high-impact educational materials.

Costin Lianu, representative of Inter-Bio, remarked:

“Hosting this assembly in Braşov has confirmed that Romania is a strategic pillar in the OrganicClimateNET network. The local farm visits demonstrated that the climate solutions we discuss theoretically are already being successfully applied on the ground. Inter-Bio remains dedicated to translating these European strategies into practical tools for every Romanian farmer.”

About OrganicClimateNET:

An EU-funded project (Grant No. 101136880) fostering a pilot network of organic farms across Europe to enhance knowledge exchange and data-driven carbon strategies.

Monitoring the performance of Agroecology: Insights from the STREAM-T tool

This webinar will introduce STREAM-T, Agroecology-TRANSECT's multi-criteria assessment (MCA) tool designed to evaluate agroecological transitions across the project's European Innovation Hubs. Led by researchers from Walloon Agricultural Research Centre (CRAW) and Wageningen University and Research (WUR)

The event will take place online, Thursday 28 May, 10:00 (ETT).

THIS WEBINAR IS OF INTEREST TO:

- Farmers and facilitators looking to understand how such tools can support farm-level decision-making and agroecological transitions.
- Researchers, advisors, and practitioners interested in agroecological performance assessment in European systems

Biocarpattia Cooperative-an initiative to promote organic food products

Aurel Blaj, representative of the Carpathian Organic Hub, is an important participant of the Organic Climate Net project.

Rooted in the heart of the Carpathian region, BioCarpathia unites dedicated local farmers, livestock breeders, and producers under one shared vision: delivering clean, natural, high-quality food while preserving traditional rural life and protecting the environment. From fresh dairy and artisanal cheeses to carefully sourced meats and seasonal produce, every BioCarpathia product reflects the purity of its origin and the passion of the people who create it.

“Consumers today want more than food—they want trust, authenticity, and a connection to where their products come from,” said a BioCarpathia representative. “That is exactly what BioCarpathia stands for.”
